
ELWYN A. TENNANT

Death came at his home at 3496 Harrison avenue Wednesday at 9 a.m. to Elwyn Arthur Tennant, who had lived here during most of his lifetime. Tennant, who was 59, had not been in good health for about two years and had become seriously ill during the past two months. He had, however, been able to be up at times until his death.

Born August 2, 1900 in Chippewa Falls, Wis., he went as an infant with his parents, Luther and Sanna Tennant, to North Dakota, and then in 1904, came with them and his brother Dick to Astoria.

Tennant attended grade and high school here. He had been employed during his entire adult lifetime at CRPA doing office work and had for many years been a purchasing agent until illness forced him to retire two months ago. He was a member of the First Lutheran church.

Surviving are his brother, Richard H. Tennant, Astoria; nephews Richard and David, Astoria, and Daniel Tennant, Los Angeles, and a niece, Miss Mary Tennant, Astoria. Details of services which will be Saturday at 10:30 a.m., will be announced by the Hughes-Ransom mortuary.

Surprise crop too big to miss

Dave Tennant surmises that the watermelons growing in his North Seattle front yard must be from seeds he spat there from watermelons past. Tennant figures they're Hermiston [illegible], "very sweet." From the sounds of things, he says, thumping the largest one, they'll be ready for harvest soon.

MOUNT RAINIER CRASH

Blame highway officials for motorcycle tragedy

I have had the good fortune to take up motorcycling late in life. After cruising and touring for a year I've decided it's too dangerous. My skill level is not great enough, injury and death are too common amongst the ranks of the riders I feel proud to have been a part of.

Lack of skill by the riders and their invisibility to autos are enough to warrant serious considerations about whether or not the thrill of biking is worth the risk of loss of life or limb.

The motorcycle tragedy on Mt. Rainier last weekend will leave lifelong scars on all those involved-almost. On the face of the report in the P-I (Sept. 29) it would appear that the person, who prior to the accident could be accused of poor judgment and lack of foresight at the very best, is perhaps the one person most responsible for the tragedy.

His lack of foresight is one thing, his unmitigated arrogance in the wake of the tragedy is horrific. I speak of course of Jim Olson, operations maintenance superintendent for the Transportation Department. "I'm sure the signs are adequate for the construction site . . . The signs have been functioning well . . . " I doubt that those loved ones of the dead couple, the young man who was driving the bus or those mutilated but alive survivors would agree with Olson.

I truly hope that there is enough humanity and caring left in our community that not one single soul would agree with Olson. It is such arrogant insensitivity that paves too many community highways with bureaucratic malaise that ultimately takes its toll on the likes of the innocent Hydes now dead and a mutilated Randal Smith.

Yes, this tragedy influenced my decision to quit riding.
